3. [REDACTED] Picked up from Mr. Fogerty, in the office of Senator William Proxmire (D., Wis.), a study on Vietnam written by Dwight H. Owen, Jr., who was subsequently killed in Vietnam. Owen's father had forwarded the study to Proxmire for whatever use might be made of it by the Government. The study has been sent to George Carver.

4. [REDACTED] As a follow-up to my earlier conversation with Senator Eastland concerning the Rodino bill, I called Eastland and informed him that there is no plan to discontinue the Radios. On the contrary, present plan is to go ahead with them although there are certain problems which must be overcome. Eastland was delighted to hear this information and informed me that he had had lunch with eight liberal Senators to whom he had mentioned the information he had received that the Radios would be closed. He said all eight were indignant that such a thing might happen, and two indicated their campaigns next year would be damaged if this does happen.
